

Recall Notice for Omnipod® Insulin Pods

On May 26, 2026, Insulet Corporation issued a recall for certain Omnipod® insulin pods, including Omnipod®5, Omnipod DASH®, and Omnipod Eros® systems. These pods are being recalled due to a small defect that can cause insulin to leak out instead of going into the body. This means you may not get the full dose of insulin you need, which can lead to high blood sugar. High blood sugar can make you very sick. If not treated, it can lead to a serious problem that may require care in the hospital.

Please carefully review the impacted product and talk to your doctor about it right away.

What this means to you:

- Stop using any affected pods right away. Switch to a pod that is not part of the recall or use another way to take your insulin. Contact your doctor if you need help choosing a safe option.
- Check your product label for the product name and company name. If you aren't sure if you have the recalled product, check with the pharmacy where you picked up your prescription.
